FOR RELEASE JUNE 11, 2022

Celebrate the Strawberry Moon by learning to make a beaded pin

In the Anishinaabe culture, this time of year is synonymous with wild strawberries bursting into bloom. In June, the moon in the Anishinaabe lunar calendar is the Strawberry Moon, or Ode'imini-giizis in Ojibwe — ode' means heart, and -min refers to the berry, while giizis means moon or month. The Kingston Frontenac Public Library invites you to celebrate the moon and the season with Liv Rondeau's popular Testsi'nehtará:ron/Bead It! workshop.

Rondeau, a talented beader, will teach registrants how to make a Strawberry Moon pin over Zoom using a pre-made beading kit participants can claim at the Library branch of their choice.

The event is happening July 9 from 1-3 p.m. Register at <https://calendar.kfpl.ca/event/6718576>.

"Having Liv with us for another session, especially to commemorate June festivities, is exciting," said Jake Miller, Librarian, Adult Programming. "Beading is such a skilled creative form and means of Indigenous cultural expression. It will be great to have her back!"
